

A funny thing about seahorses: It's the boys who get pregnant and have babies! They're the only species in the the animal kingdom whose males give live birth. It starts with a dance - a mommy and daddy seahorse will swim together for hours, sometimes days at a time. They'll entwine their tails and face snout to snout in what looks like a seahorse kiss. After 14 to 28 days, out pop the babies...hundreds of them! Sometimes these proud papa's will then get pregnant again by nightfall, starting the cycle all over again.
